"NATURAL BEAUTY" IS A 20th CENTURY PHRASE

MAXWELL C. WHEAT, JR.

Consolidated Edison Company's proposal to impose an impressively costly ($162 million) pumped storage hydro-electric power plant on Storm King Mountain was 200 years late. The project, "thrusting its man-made might into the flanks of the mountain" on the north face where the eye focuses on the most dramatic view of the gateway to the Hudson Highlands, would probably have won a vociferous rumble of approval from the cultural autocrat of the 1700's, Dr. Johnson. He had been "astonished and repelled" by the "wide extent of hopeless sterility"
